Transcending Divides with Sara Drury

Wednesday, September 30 from noon to 1 pm
(Free virtual presentation via Zoom, in collaboration with the Wells County Chamber of Commerce)

Dr. Sara Drury's interactive online presentation will be on "Transcending Divides through Creative Conversations." She will directly engage the history of Indiana as a cross-roads of America, a place where there have always been boundaries – geographic, demographic, socioeconomic – that seem to separate our communities. The question at the heart of the workshop is whether these histories and communities are as divided as they may seem. Participants will learn some of this history, examine divides in their everyday lives, weigh what values they hold in common or in tension with other Hoosiers, and deliberate different ideas and pathways forward. This type of conversation will leave participants with new skills for understanding and working together to address public problems.

Sara Drury is the Director of Wabash Democracy and Public Discourse at Wabash College. She works with students, staff, and community partners to design and conduct public forum events around the midwestern United States. As an Indiana transplant, Sara has embraced our state's urban and rural communities. She makes her home in Montgomery County and loves traveling to local restaurants around the state. Her work connects her with large cities and small communities across Indiana.

RSVP by calling the library at 260-824-1612 and speaking to Emily Marshall or via the Library Event Calendar on www.wellscolibrary.org. An email with details of how to log-in to the presentation will be sent the week of the event.

INconversation with Jean Thompson

Tuesday, November 10 from 7-8 pm
(Free virtual presentation via Zoom, sponsored by Indiana Humanities)

Join a special INconversation with Jean Thompson, the author of The Year We Left Home, Indiana Humanities' 2020 selection for its One State/One Story statewide read and our library's 2020 One Book One County title.

Jean Thompson, the New York Times bestselling author and National Book Award finalist for The Year We Left Home, is a Midwesterner with Indiana roots. She will be talking about her book, her career as a writer, and the stories we tell about the Midwest.

Barb Shoup, the founding director of the Indiana Writers Center, will moderate this conversation about place, identity, and writing in the Midwest.

This virtual event is free but advanced registration is required. A confirmation email with details of how to log-in to the program will be sent the week of the event.

One Book One County

Adults and Teens: One Book One County is a community read program for Wells County held in September and October every year.

The program is designed to create a countywide discussion by encouraging all residents to read the same book.

This year's title is The Year We Left Home by Jean Thompson, which happens to also be the One State/One Story title for Indiana this year.

Check out a copy
at the library!

About the Book: “The Year We Left Home follows the Erickson family through the many changes affecting American life at the end of the twentieth century. From city rooftops to country farms, college campuses to small-town main streets, the characters in Thompson’s novel search for fulfillment and happiness in an ever-changing, often alienating country. The story asks us to consider the enduring, uniting power of place—why we choose to leave and when we decide to come home.”

This program has been made possible through Indiana Humanities as part of One State/One Story. One State/One Story: The Year We Left Home is presented by Indiana Humanities in partnership with the Indiana Center for the Book and the Indiana State Library.
